Meadville, PA August 22, 2005 - Maggie Armstrong, RPSGT

Maggie Armstrong, recently earned the certification of Board Certified Registered Polysomnographic Technologist (RPSGT). Through board certification, Registered Polysomnographic Technologists demonstrate a defined level of education and training, as well as, knowledge and skills necessary to meet the public's demand for expert technological sleep care.

The BRPT was established in 1978 to benefit the developing field of polysomnographic technology and set credentialing standards for technologists. Credentialed technologists have made a commitment to professionalism, competence and ethics by meeting the BRPT standards for certification.

Maggie Armstrong is one of the sleep technologists in Vantage's Sleep Program. Vantage's clinical staff currently consists of RPSGT's, as well as, Respiratory Therapists and nurses.

As more is learned of sleep disorders and their variability, hospitals are experiencing a growing demand for additional sleep facilities. Vantage® has developed a sleep program which may be contracted out to local community hospitals to help with these increasing sleep center demands.
